Background

The Golden Building was built in the 1890s and for many years has been a prominent retail location for the bustling district of Fields Corner.

Over the decades, the building suffered fires and cosmetic changes but its decorative wooden cornice and other historic features remained, hinting at a more attractive past beneath cladding of modern metal siding, changed windows, and muddled storefronts. HBI produced a rendering of a conceptual rehabilitation project based on glimpses of the building found in old photographs, and met with the Fields Corner Main Street program and the building owner to discuss the idea of completing a model preservation rehabilitation project. Owner Stephen Golden was captivated by the project idea and worked with HBI on a redesign of the building face, interior and systems improvements. HBI helped Golden with technical assistance, project management and financing.
